Not applicable.
List new courses required for the new or revised curriculum. How do they support the overall program objectives of the major/minor/concentrations?

The Asian Studies Program relies on existing courses offered in the departments of affiliated faculty. There are no new courses required for the revised curriculum. Rather, the revised curriculum aims to expand the student’s ability to craft a program that develops both a broad and deep engagement with knowledge related to a student interest in the study of Asia.

Supply support letter from the Library, Dean, and/or Department Chair if needed
(all new majors/minors will need a support letter from the appropriate administrator.)
Not applicable.

Supply a resolution for all new majors/programs; name changes of colleges, departments, degrees; transfer of departments from one college to another; creation of new departments; requests for permanent status.
Not applicable.

Explain, when appropriate, how this new/revised curriculum supports the 5 goals of undergraduate education:

Revisions support goals of undergraduate education, particularly “Read critically, analyze arguments and information, and engage in constructive ideation.”

Courses in HIST, ANTH, PHIL, LLCU, ENGL, POSC, and CRJU include elements that address these learning goals.

“Communicate effectively in writing, orally, and through creative expression.”

Courses at the 200 and 300-level in particular require students to express themselves in writing and orally. Courses in the humanities and social sciences at these levels require the writing of essays, constructive feedback, revision, and oral presentations.

“Work collaboratively and independently within and across a variety of cultural contexts and a spectrum of differences.”

This learning goal is at the heart of our enterprise and informs every course that we offer, as well as the speaker series, study abroad, and other activities that shape the experiences of our majors and minors.

“Critically evaluate the ethical implications of what they say and do.”

PHIL and CRJU courses as part of the major and minor address this learning goal in particular.

Revisions reflect the longstanding commitment on the part of the Asian Studies Program to cultivate an international and comparative perspective on grand challenges and great human debates. The reformulation of the major encourages students to take courses from offerings that speak to Northeast (China, Japan, Korea), Southeast (Vietnam, Malaysia, Cambodia, Thailand, Burma, Indonesia, etc.), and South Asia (India, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, etc.). Courses in the program explore interaction within and among countries and regions.

Where the previous formulation of the major was very prescriptive, Asian Studies affiliated faculty have determined that students are more engaged and animated when they are able to chart their own programs across the expanding offerings of the curriculum. Courses focus on reading critically and analyzing arguments, communicating effectively, working collaboratively and independently, and engaging critically.
Identify other units affected by the proposed changes:
(This would include other departments/units whose courses are a required part of the proposed curriculum. Attach permission from the affected units. If no other unit is affected, enter “None”)
None. The revised curriculum does not place any additional requirements on any departments or programs.

Describe the rationale for the proposed program change(s):
(Explain your reasons for creating, revising, or deleting the curriculum or program.)

I. Description
With the addition of affiliated faculty to the program there are increasing possibilities for students to explore coursework in geography, the anthropology of health, and the history and politics of South Asia, particularly India. Rather than require that students focus on what were once the strengths of the program in history, particularly the history of Japan and China, the revised curriculum opens up the possibility for students to concentrate on other world regions or other disciplines. At the same time, the revised curriculum maintains the Asian Studies Program’s strength of interdisciplinarity by requiring majors to take courses in multiple departments or programs.

A. Institutional Factors
   a. The revision is consistent with the University of Delaware’s stated goals of globalism, diversity, and multiculturalism.
   b. Planning: The revised curriculum reflects the input of affiliated faculty with successful experiences revising curricula in their home departments.
   c. Impact on other programs: the revised curriculum does not affect any other departments or programs.
   d. Resource utilization: The revision does not place additional demands on resources.

B. Student Demand: The revision responds to student demand for a program of Asian Studies that allows them to focus on a particular region or theme within the interdisciplinary and trans-Asiatic approach of the program. Many students studying Chinese and Japanese in UD language programs have expressed an interest in the revised curriculum.

II. Curriculum Specifics
This interdisciplinary minor offers students the opportunity to enhance their major with 15 credit hours of Asia-related coursework. Students have the option of an Asian Studies Minor or Asian Studies Minor With Language.

Please see attached side-by-side comparison.

Program Requirements:
(Show the new or revised curriculum as it should appear in the Course Catalog. If this is a revision, be sure to indicate the changes being made to the current curriculum and include a side-by-side comparison of the credit distribution before and after the proposed change.) See example of side by side.
The revised curriculum as it should appear in the Course Catalog appears on the attached side-by-side comparison.
